NEW SCALES, DE-ESCALED

"Freedom, Sancho, is one of the most precious gifts that heaven has bestowed upon men; no treasures that the earth holds buried or the sea conceals can compare with it; for freedom, as for honour, life may and should be ventured." Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra, Don Quixote. The metaphor of an adventurous hero who in his mad fantasy reinvents himself as giants, where others think they see ordinary windmills, crosses the centuries of universal culture.

Antoine de Saint-Exupery confesses to the Little Prince:

I showed the grown ups my masterpiece, and I asked them if my drawing scared them. They answered: "why be scared of a hat?" "My drawing was not a picture of a hat. It was a picture of a boa constrictor digesting an elephant."

Freedom, freedom of thought and expression; art and artistic creation and its processes of experimentation; the subjectivity of truth and the way we perceive reality; the construction of narrative discourses, history, knowledge and understanding of the world are concepts about which the visual artists presented by the Scales project talk, in its second edition, this time through the virtual space offered to us by the Miami Hispanic Cultural Art Center.

These seven artists from the Midwest region of Brazil, a region less known and promoted internationally in comparison to the large economic and cultural cities that identify the Brazilian geography, come together in a promotion platform that enables collective exchange from the personal individuality of each of their artistic experiences and practices. And apparently they did so with the pretext of reflecting on the relationships between the dimensions of a represented drawing, design, or object and its real dimensions, in works that show links to the graphic-spatial, architecture, environmental design, inhabited space, and remembered space; but the Scales highlights, in my view, above all, the disparate ways in which we can learn to see the world, beyond the learned and legitimized notions of the centers of power, those narratives upheld as absolute truths and that art and freedom of creation deny, in this human capacity to imagine possible worlds, that we may dwell in dreams.

The plans and drawings by Ana Flavia Maru rebuild possible universes and resemanticize objects; André Felipe Cardoso searches in memory for space-time connections that recompose fragments of possible identities; Estevão Parreira's drawings reformulate a symbolic universe that feeds on Brazilian popular sources and magic-religious cosmogonies, having the human being as the center, in an aesthetic that transits between the oneiric and the absurd.

Harriel Ravignet rethinks through collage the personal and collective historical memory of his ancestral heritage; Isabella Brito reformulates the inhabitable space, as if starting from a blank canvas, to imagine and capture agonizing fantasies between the phobia and hedonism of forms; Gerson Fogaça appeals to color to intervene in the world he thinks he sees, in what always strikes me as an obsessive allegory between life and death, lights, shapes, and shadows, which run through his pictorial experience; Evandro Soares blurs the real architecture camouflaged in another possible architecture: deep down it's just that, to understand that nothing is true, that nothing is unreal, that everything is possible in a world of infinite dimensions and nuances.

Reviewing the work of these artists for the Scales project, I can't help but hear Jarabe de Palo's song "Depende, depende ¿de que depende? De según como se mire, todo depende..." be the soundtrack of this project. Or in the manner of José Saramago: "(...) each of us sees the world with the eyes we possess, na eyes see what they choose to see, even if they're only made of stone, and tall prows, even if they're only na illusion."

DAYALIS GONZALES PERDOMO

Jardins de Hialeah, May 2022.

NEW SCALES

Inverted Scales (Escalas Invertidas) is a platform for the promotion and diffusion of visual artists based in the mid-west of Brazil, with the desire to create international bridges between the production developed in this territory, in parallel with other contexts.

In recent years, we have learned that the interlocution and access to artistic production does not need to be limited to the context of physical presences. Virtuality has become an active field of passage and access for many artistic projects, and, in this sense, we find that there is still much to be experienced and built in the universe of online possibilities.

The new edition, in partnership with the Miami Hispanic Cultural Art Center, reaffirms the belief of producing another way to interchange our ideas. This edition, curated by Dayaliz González Perdomo, presents two artists of the same generation who have already consolidated their trajectories in the art circuit, Gerson Fogaça and Evandro Soares. In different ways, each one of them presents questions about the flatness of the media in which they work, either through painting in Fogaça or in his series of experiments, between drawing and the three-dimensional illusion developed by Soares.

Our challenge is to make this platform a possible place for interlocutions and encounters, in each edition, in its own way, without establishing and forging finished limits. We want to test the elasticity of this unbounded space, with the awareness that we are producing narratives that will resonate for a territory beyond the now. It is with great pleasure that we present the work of the curators and the artists, so that our desire to bring together what may seem unreachable reverberates back to you.

Estêvão Parreiras Pereira has a bachelor's degree in Visual Arts from the School of Visual Arts at UFG. His research is based on the practice of drawing and proposes a reflection on the sheet of paper as a receptive support and compositional space. In his research, he seeks to discuss plastic languages and poetics of drawing. Estêvão deals with his reflections as an artist, observing his relationship with his surroundings, where affective places, the delicacy of making art, and the healthy practice of drawing are present issues. In addition, he experiments with various materials with a predominance of mixed works on paper. Poetic thoughts emerge in the works in the form of stains, calligraphies, scribbles, and doodles, among others... Estevão participated in the exhibitions: "A body in the air ready to make noise" (Um corpo no ar pronto para fazer barulho), Museum of Contemporary Art of Goiás – Goiânia/GO, 2018. 44th SARP – Ribeirão Preto National Contemporary Art Show, Ribeirão Preto Museum of Art, Ribeirão Preto/SP, 2019. 25th Anapolino Art Salon, Antonio Sibasolly Gallery, Anápolis/GO, 2020. 48th Luiz Sacilotto Contemporary Art Salon, Casa do olhar Luiz Sacilotto, Santo André/SP, 2020. 2nd National Salon of Small Formats of Britânia, Britânia Museum of Art, Britânia, GO, 2020. 45th SARP – National Salon of Ribeirão Preto National-Contemporary, Ribeirão Preto Museum of Art, Ribeirão Preto/SP, 2020.

Of Afro-Brazilian origin, coming from the simple layer of the Brazilian population to whom the access to academic knowledge is denied, he had to work very early to earn a living, and while still young he became a dedicated locksmith craftsman. It was this professional experience that provided the structure, technique, and poetics of his work.
